

THE GLEICHEN CALL

VOLUME XXXIV

NO. 24

GLEICHEN, ALBERTA, WEDNESDAY AUGUST 27, 1941

SUBSCRIPTION $2.00 PER YEAR

WILL HONOR OUR MEN IN UNIFORM

Wednesday September 10, will mark the beginning of the third year of Canada's participation in the war. In acknowledgement of that fact the government, by proclamation, is observing the period September 10-17 as a week to "honor our men in uniform and re-dedicate ourselves to the service of our country and our cause." The provincial governments, mayors, service and other clubs, churches and schools are all being asked to lend their assistance in making this week, one of real national significance. The radio and the motion picture industry have already promised their full support.

RED CROSS NOTES

(Mrs. S. E. Dufour, Convenor)

Red Cross workers are invited to Mrs. Riddell's home east of Calgary on Friday afternoon—weather permitting. Cars will leave the work room at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. T. C. Brown is in charge of the raffling of a very pretty quilt, which will be drawn for at a later date.

The average monthly expenditures for work room purposes for the past 10 months have been $66.60. All work is as evenly divided as possible among armed forces, hospital and refugees.

To correct any impression that any one may have that the Red Cross is broke, I would like to say that that perhaps the funds may be temporarily low, the Red Cross is not broke, and as long as there are hearts of compassion attuned to the needs of to-day and willing to work, the Red Cross nor any other war charities organization will not be broke. This has been fittingly exemplified as during the past week members of the Red Cross work room have raised nearly $50, at Mrs. McKay's Victory Tea and on Saturday night at a handbag and lunch fry booth which curbside service provided. This was a new venture and proved very successful, being capably managed by Mrs. Bond and a splendid staff of helpers. Thanks go to those who donated, potatoes, corn, meat, beans, baked peas, etc., to make up the variety on the menu.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

The introduction of unemployment insurance in Canada on July 1 of this year rises to $500,000 Canadian employees the same number of unemployed that 28,000,000 workers in the United States are already receiving.

Franklin D. Roosevelt as governor of the New York State was the first prominent political leader in the United States to advocate unemployment insurance. At the 1930 conference of state governors in Salt Lake City he urged consideration of the subject and in January, 1931, he assembled the governors of seven states in Albany, New York, to discuss whether they could jointly work out definite program. After he became president of the United States his administration passed social security legislation which soon led to the creation of unemployment compensation laws in every state of the Union. Speaking on this subject in 1934 President Roosevelt advocated "some safeguard against misfortunes which cannot be wholly eliminated in a free world." Unemployment compensation was one of these safeguards.

The essential idea in an Unemployment Compensation or Unemployment Insurance plan is the creation and building up, during periods of employment, of reserves from which benefits are paid workers while, during periods of slack employment, are separated from their jobs. The Canadian Unemployment Insurance Plan follows the practice used to successfully in Great Britain where employers, employees and the state contribute on a co-operative basis to an Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Unemployment insurance is considered to be one of Canada's greatest measures of social legislation. From

This productive capacity is a valuable national economic resource which once wasted, cannot be reclaimed or used. From the standpoint of individual unemployment, the worker the most serious immediate result of unemployment is the loss of the means of livelihood. Money income is the primary but not the only loss to which the worker is subjected. His savings are soon depleted; his standard of living sinks to lower levels; and health requirements are neglected. Millions of Canadian wage earners are now provided with a degree of social security which will remove many of the evils and hazards of unemployment. These Canadians will receive the same protection as their fellow wage earners in the United States, Great Britain and the British Dominions.

The order which ended the sale of sliced bread in Canada on August 11 applied to bread in any form including bread rolls and any other rolls made from unswetened dough, according to a statement issued by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Cessation of the sale of sliced bread was ordered as a means of conserving labor and electric power and of avoiding additional costs of wrapping of sliced loaves. The purchase of slicing machinery is not only a factor in determining the retail price of bread, but a considerable portion of this slicing equipment is manufactured in the United States, replacement would mean the expenditure of foreign exchange now needed for the purchase of munitions of war.

WEDDINGS

TAYLOR-METHERAL

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Metheral of Crossfield, was the scene of a very pretty but quiet wedding Friday, August 16th, at 7 p.m. Their daughter Mildred Dorothy was united in the bonds of holy matrimony with Corporal Robert E. Taylor of Glouchester by Rev. J. E. Ball.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, looked very charming wearing a Queens blue and white ensemble and carrying a large bouquet of sweet peas. The bridesmaid, Miss Virginia Taylor looked very smart in a harvest green dress with beige accessories and wore a corsage of roses. The groom was supported by James H. Scholefield. Ladies Phyllis Scholefield and Gilbert Stiles acted as flower girl and ring bearer respectfully.

Miss Claire Metheral played the wedding march and Miss Marjorie Metheral sang "Because" during the signing of the register.

A reception was provided over by bride's mother who wore navy blue and white with a corsage of roses, was held for immediate relatives. The brides going going away outfit was an auburn blue dressmaker's suit with navy accessories.

After a short honeymoon in Calgary the happy couple will make their home in Camrose where the groom is stationed with the instructional staff.

CHAPTER XXI

After that tete-a-tete supper in his handsome apartment, Jose Macias seemed only to be waiting for Devona to break. His kindness, his thoughtful attentions, his every gesture only reassured that the menace, if temporarily withdrawn, was an ever-present threat.

Stealing herself, she went on with him, returned smile for smile, gave not an inch in her defense. Careful to try to keep him there, pleasing his patrons, she did, hourly, made herself indispensable to his business. Her smiling, gracious manner, her rapid, glowing repertoire of songs, her varied and elaborate costumes—all part of her desperate effort to insure his presence.

It wasn't long before the suspicion, planted the first time she looked into the secret wall safe hidden in his office, grew listless and intriguing. Something strange, some secret activity absorbed Jose Macias. She was sure of it, something from which he profited huge sums. Some thing that he did not connect with the El Mexicano.

Flashed and excited, or depressed and acridly bitter—his very moods were a barometer. Always the result of some mysterious telephone call, a hurried trip, alone, in the powerful coupe. If once he learned just what was behind this mysterious coming and going—that might prove the solution to her problem!

But she did learn the combination to the safe. Macias often insisted she wear the lovely mantilla and the jeweled comb. And just as she, who insisted the mantilla ornaments be returned to the wall safe.

Once, she'd set her mind to it, it was simple to watch, to listen—to wait appearing to do nothing, to keep the dial. Around three times, back twice around again, back half-way. Not that she'd ever have occasion to use that interesting bit of information. Macias seldom left his office unlocked. Still, there was no harm in knowing. And perhaps some advantage.

Soon, however, her curiosity concerning Macias was quenched by a deeper, more compelling emotion. Once again, a newspaper item, a picture of Dale Brasher, a glowing headline thrust that familiar image back into her conscious mind. This time, the headline touted her from the news rack in her hotel lobby.

YOUNG ASSISTANT D. A. LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN TO CLEAN CITY

Devona gave a coin from her purse, looked the paper from the back, her eyes racing over the fine print.

"Young Dale Brasher, assistant to the Los Angeles County District Attorney Martin, set underworld chieftains looking to their defenses this week when his raid on the Ling Wang Lui Restaurant netted him vital evidence in his war on the city's dope rings."

Dale hadn't missed this time! She flushed with pride in spite of herself. He would succeed. He was bound to. Hungrily, she studied the poorly printed photograph, read every word in the long column. The city needed clean-cut, ambitious, fearless young men like Dale Brasher, the staff applauded in a challenging editorial. The city was proud of this stalwart young hero and should do everything possible to assist and protect him in the dangerous fight he'd undertaken.

Protect him! The words leaped at her from the page. And with every successful step, Dale was probably in increasing danger. Some hiring, some wild bullet, even an accidental shot from the gun of a co-worker. Dale's life might be sacrificed any moment.

But day by day, the mounting evidence of Dale's success piled high in every edition of the daily papers. Los Angeles, aroused to the importance of his fight, cheered from the sidelines.

He was succeeding magnificently, she realized, thrilled but—and anxiety rose again—at what terrible cost! Probably hundreds of people deprived of easy money hated Dale Brasher. It would only take one to put Dale out of the way.

One evening, as Devona sat as usual at a small, half-drawn table eating her early dinner, Macias crossed the deserted dining room to join her. He'd taken to dropping into the opposite chair very often lately. His manner always casual, his courtesy undiminished, his intentions unmistakable.

"I see you are interested in our new, friendly crusade," he smiled when he'd given her the order to the waiter hovering solicitously. "Been doing a wonderful job, hasn't he?"

Macias nodded. "The boy has been lucky so far. He'll probably get it before he's through, though I'm in too deep. I'm afraid."

"Looks like it," she forced lightness into her tone, deliberately changed the subject lest her tell-tale anxiety betray her.

But, a moment later, when she glanced across the big dinner room, recognized Dale's well-proportioned height, actually looked squarely into his face, her own cheeks blanched.

"Speaking of the devil," she managed nippantly, diverting Macias' attention with a little story of Jose Brasher's new, probably looking for you."

"So it is." Pushing back his chair, Macias rose, crossed smiling to meet him.

Dale looked startled, she thought, catching two men shaking hands. But Jose Macias didn't blink. Once he glanced over Macias' shoulder, looked squarely at her for a moment, then, as if she were any part of the furnishings, he glanced away again, indifferently. Not even a nod of recognition.

From the corner of her eyes, she saw them disappear into Macias' private office now.

"Smatter? Swallow a fish bone?" Grinning, Manuel lunged into the chair Macias had just left. "Or did you and the big boss have a lover's quarrel?"

"No, silly. Why?"

"I don't know how you get away with it, at that," he went on frankly. "Now the last dame Macias had here—

—Freda Camp, you know—ever seen her?"

Devona shook her head.

"She hangs around here a lot—that is until Macias gets really sore and she kicks her out again. She's afraid of him. And not bad-looking either. Or she wasn't? Poor kid."

"Why? What happened?"

"Oh, she came in to the big city from her old man's ranch all blood and blue-eyed and ambitious to be big stars. And she falls for Macias' dark-eyed romance like a ton of ripe fruit. Macias got tired of her, of course. Now she's all washed up."

But the little devil still sticks around, hoping for another break. I don't see how they figure to come ahead, these dames. But they'll have their time. He grinned, pulled himself out of his chair.

A moment later, Manuel passed her table again, whispered hoarsely. "Here's Freda now—the blond baby at Diego's first dance. See her? She'll wait for a chance to give Macias You watch. Probably out of dough again."

Across the room at one of the side-wall tables, a small woman with hard blue eyes much too large for her pinched white face, stared at the talker slowly. Her suit was from the Russian side of the line, her fur shabby, her make-up too obvious. Macias' cast-off girl friend, Devona watched the girl's transparent attempts at nonchalance, and a cathartic aggressiveness every time the door to Macias' office opened.

When he finally did come out, said goodbye to Dale, the girl's attitude turned definitely jauntily. Then, as Macias passed her table, her rouged lips curved into a smile, her eyes half-closed as if with charming boredom. She intercepted him with a little laugh, a hand laid lightly against his arm.

Macias' automatic smile turned instantly to a dark scowl as he muttered something, jerked his head toward the door. Then, deliberately, he brushed her hand from his arm, stalked off.

Only when the thin figure had disappeared, did Devona realize she'd been holding her breath, that the tragic little drama she had just witnessed had taken only a few moments to enact, and that—if she lived tonight, she'd have forgotten the passionate despair etched deep into that stricken young girl's face.

There—Devona realized with sudden, awful intuition—but for the grace of good luck and a few wits, might be herself! A mistake, a chance little drama, a tell-tale glance—her own security hung on so slim a thread.

Restlessly, and to get away from her own thoughts Devona wandered toward the cocktail lounge, where a crowd was already gathering about it.

It was too early to begin the Troubadour's serenading. It was too early to be needed as hostess or dancing partner. Still, she moved aimlessly through the room. Aimlessly, and yet as if drawn by some invisible thread, she felt a tell-tale glance—his toward a tall, familiar figure standing alone near the end of the bar, drinking his old-fashioned with calm dispassion. Dale!

He saw her at almost the same instant. Their glances met, clung like high-voltage wires. Then he bowed—a curt, formal little gesture as definitely final as Macias' scowling shrug of a moment ago.

Purious at herself for having given him this chance to snub her in her room, she rallied at herself stormily. Devona returned his nod frostily, and the room before the pandemonium that had broken loose inside her showed in her own stricken face.

And later that night alone in her room, she rallied at herself stormily. Why did she let it hurt so? Why did she care? Why was she spineless enough to care for the man who, selfish, heartless, unscrupulous, merited only her scorn?

On impulse, she burrowed under the pile of handkerchiefs, found the newspaper photograph, tore it into a hundred jagged fragments. Raising her one window, she flung the white shower out into the darkness.

Of course, with no more Sunday driving, her could lose touch with day drivers. They can, however, go back to changing signs in canoe.

The territory under direct supervision of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is as large as the whole of Europe.

From the corner of her eyes, she saw them disappear into Macias' private office now.

"Smatter? Swallow a fish bone?" Grinning, Manuel lunged into the chair Macias had just left. "Or did you and the big boss have a lover's quarrel?"

"No, silly. Why?"

The Greatest Fisherman

Squadron Of The R.A.F. Found Him

In North Africa

"London Calling" gives us this story. As far back as the oldest stomach in a desert squadron of the R.A.F. could remember, it had had nothing in the way of food that had not come out of a tin. But, close at hand, the blue Mediterranean lapped the sands of the North African coast. With a sudden flash of insight, one of the more astute minds grasped the fact that this blue water, Mussolini's very own Mare Nostrum, could solve the problem of gastronomic monotony.

They got the lines, made hooks, opened tins for bait and fished assiduously, with watering teeth, for hours on end. The fish snuffed at the bait, sneered, and swam off.

Next day, when he was walking down to the beach with a number of beer bottles in his hand and a posse of stout swimmers at his heel. The bottle contained R.E. and fuse. Shortly afterwards there was a dull rumble, the sea heaved slightly, the swimmers plunged in and returned with shells of stunned fish in their arms.

There was fresh fish for everybody that night. The toast in the Mess was: "To the greatest fisherman the R.A.F. has ever known."

All Russia On Guard

People In Small Towns Are Helping To Fight Nazis

Millions of people, says a Russian communique, now guard factories, plants, mines, power stations and farms, and individual soldiers are organized against German spies and diversionists who might have landed by parachute or otherwise got behind the lines.

Several German planes flew by night near a small town and two shopkeepers saw German parachutists descending, the communique said. One of them hid himself to watch what the other mounded a horse and rode to the nearest army post. Army men wiped out the entire detachment. It was said.

A woman collective farmer, working in a field, saw an armed stranger come out of the woods nearby, the communique said. The stranger approached her and asked her about the roads to villages and towns around, and about state farms and cattle-breeding stations.

The woman pretended to be deaf, the communique said. She forced the German to stop as loud in question. She, and replied so lustily herself, that another woman farmer on the other side of a clump of bushes was warned and ran to the village.

Collective farmers and members of the local termination squad gathered and went to the farm. The German fired, the communique said, but he was disarmed and turned over to soldiers.

Shows Wonderful Work Done For Hospitals By Princess Alice

The memory of the work of the Princess Alice, now of Rideau Hall, Ottawa, lives in the reports of hospitals in this British Union of South Africa, where she resided from 1923 to 1931, when her husband, the Earl of Athlone, was Governor-General at Cape Town.

In an address recently on the hospitals of the Cape Peninsula, Capt. W. D. Hare, M.P., chairman of the Cape Hospital Board, said wonderful work was being done by the Princess Alice Home where accommodation for an extra eighty beds was being provided by the Nuffield Trust.

BE UP IN YOUR ETUETTE TO MAKE A HIT ON DATES

Errors Hint You Go Out Seldom

She's trying so hard to make an impression! But, knowing little of the etiquette of dating, what an awkward introduction she's created. It's the girl's place to suggest going home on a date at a party, and if you just sit, waiting for the man to make a move, of course you embarrass him.

Fear more at ease with the girl whose smooth manners show she's used to going places—and they feel proud of her.

So, if you'd get your share of invitations, be up in etiquette. Don't have to hesitate when going into a movie theatre, entering a room, getting out of a car—because you aren't sure who should go first.

At the movie show, go ahead of your beau at the ticket-holder's entrance, you are first to enter or leave a room—but the man always keeps out of a car first.

Show you're used to little courtesies, too. When given a compliment, don't flatter "You're kidding," but reply with a smiling "Thank you." Let your bouquet list tailcoats, help you with your wraps, open a door for you.

Read the 32-page booklet learn the correct thing for games, dances, and movies; for visiting, entertaining, motorboating, and travelling. Discusses the petting question, office matters, and more.

Record Wheat Order

Will Give Britain Year's Supply Of 9,500,000 Loaves Daily

The United Kingdom's Ministry of Food, in a statement today, said it has broken its own record with an order for 120,000,000 bushels (about 1,200,000 tons) placed with the Canadian Wheat Board.

The previous largest purchase was of 100,000,000 bushels, ordered by the Ministry last year. The new commitment is to be delivered during the 12 months ending May, 1942.

Reckoning 50 1/2 lb. loaves to the ton of wheat and using white flour of 75 per cent extraction, this will provide Britain with 3,578,000,000 of the 5 1/2 lb. loaves her housewives favor. There will also be 750,000 tons of wheat-feed in the form of bran, middlings and wheat germ meal. For Britain's dairy cows, beef cattle, pigs and poultry.

If the wheat is converted into 65 per cent extraction national wheat meal flour, a 4,680,000,000 2 1/2 lb. loaves would be produced but only 450,000 more could be available for livestock feeding.

As Britain does not at present make more than ten loaves in every hundred from the higher extraction flour, a total of 3,448,200,000 loaves representing about 9,500,000 tons of wheat for the 12 months ending May, 1942, will obtain from this order.

"On this continent, we are fortunate in having 66 per cent of the world's potential oil supply together with ample refining capacity, so there is no actual shortage of petroleum. But there is a very acute shortage of transportation to place it where it is needed. This shortage has been brought about by the transfer to Britain of a large number of our oil carrying vessels."

"In normal times, Canadians use huge quantities of gasoline. Eighty-five per cent of the crude used in Canada to make gasoline and all other petroleum products we consume is imported. If we are all to do our share in providing the growing needs of the Empire's fighting forces for petroleum, we must save gasoline."

"We all know that avoiding needless and non-essential driving will contribute much towards this saving. But there are other ways not so obvious, but equally effective. This book tells about them. You will find some in interesting ways you may not have known before!"

FLIVVER RACE LIKELY TO BE HAIR-RAISING KIND

Model T Ford cars are reported at a premium in the Calgary area and prices have doubled and trebled in the last few days as interest mounts in the one-hundred-mile "The Little Street Stakes" to be run off on Calgary's Victoria Park race this Labor Day, September 1, under the auspices of the Lions' Club in aid of their war service fund.

Ancient flivvers that have felt the heat of many a blistering sun and refused to budge an inch on many a frosty morn are feeling the splash of oil and gas in rusty interiors. Fervid activity is witnessed around garages, service stations and backyards as contestants groom their entries for the long struggle and are expected to test the courage and endurance of drivers and mechanics to the utmost, according to officials of the Lions Club.

Aimed at raising funds for war services, the race itself is expected to provide exciting entertainment for spectators, with rib-splitting comical situations as well as moments of genuine suspense as the rambling wrecks give their all in one final effort to win the first prize money of $250. Winner of second prize will get $150, with the third prize of $75 and fourth money amounting to $25.

Plans are underway to provide additional awards for the entry from the greatest number of miles away from Calgary, and for the most original paint job, as well as the oldest model entered.

Grain Storage

Beyond a doubt, the safest place to store grain is in a licensed country of terminal elevator. However, it is not unlikely that considerable quantities will, of necessity, be stored on the farm.

If sound weather-proof farm storage is inadequate, information on suitable inexpensive structures will be welcome.

An excellent bulletin, entitled "Storage Grain on the Farm," has been issued by the Manitoba Department of Agriculture and Insulation, Winnipeg. Several types of temporary and permanent structures are described and illustrated, together with details on construction. There is doubt, if any farmers to whom this bulletin has been sent, that grain bins are not costly and, if properly constructed, will keep grain in good condition. They must, of course, be covered with hay, straw or shingles.

Circular No. 34, distributed by the Agricultural Extension Service, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, also contains a number of useful suggestions particularly respecting coverings for temporary bins and protection against damage to grain in bins bottoms caused by soil moisture. It is unwise to leave grain on the floor in unprotected bins, as it can be protected at very small cost by methods described in the two aforementioned publications.

For special problems, information can be obtained from Departments of Agriculture, Edmonton, Saskatoon and Winnipeg, respectively.

cent over last year. "The importance of this business from a war point of view can hardly be over-emphasized," said Mr. Stead. "Our purchases of war materials in the United States must be paid for in U. S. currency, and the most practical way to get it is to invite Americans to Canada for their vacations. They get the greatest holiday country in the world, 10 per cent premium on their money, and a sense of pride in carrying out the good neighbor policy."

Regulations governing the use of fuel gasoline in farm machinery were amended recently it has been announced by Hon. R. C. Manning, provincial secretary. The amendment allows farmers to move their machinery across a highway or a reasonable distance from one farm to another without changing from purple to white gasoline. The Act allows the purchase of purple fuel by farmers upon payment of 1¢ per gallon tax instead of the regular tax of 2¢ per gallon.

The present rate of royalty payments on oil production will be affected at next year's year. The rate of provincial royalty was raised from 10 per cent to twelve and a half per cent of gross production this was to be unchanged for five years.

Canadian public to use less gasoline and oil is real evidence of the emergency which faces the country. In the opinion of officials in the oil controller's department.

The new order lengthens the period to twice that time. In making the announcement, Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines, said the longer time was designed to give investors a greater feeling of security. He said that it was important to stimulate oil production under war time conditions by every possible means.

BUYING A FUTURE

When you are buying business training, you are buying a future. The quality of your training will determine to a great extent the kind of future you will have. If you do quality work you will receive regular promotions with a quality salary.

It will pay you to attend a quality school—with excellent teachers, new and modern equipment, well-rounded courses—a school with a record of school-wide success, a reputation and prestige earned over many years by turning out secretaries and accountants that have from the beginning given splendid service.

For 14 years the Garbutt Business College has been established in Alberta. If it had not been an excellent school it would have been dead and buried long ago. It is still at work with life doing better work than ever, keeping abreast with the times. It will pay you to attend this tried and true school. It will pay you to be able to say you are a graduate of Garbutt's.

Our 'all term opens on September 2, but you may enter earlier as our schools are kept open all summer. The sooner you begin, the sooner you will be drawing a salary cheque.
